Demand from Every Source in the Market, While the Trading Conditions Were Against an Advance.

There was more excitement and upfriving of prices on the Cotton Exchange -day, November and December being the most active months in the trading. Cofton was firm at the opening in the face of cables from Liverpool, which were construed as decidedly bearish, while the movement at the ports was also unfavorable to an advance.

The prices showed declines of from a points to alwances of 12, the support in some months being good enough to force up prices in the face of the bear-
